Interpretations/Conclusions

Efficient Build-Up and Left-Side Construction

- The team uses a short, supported build-up, with frequent passes between nearby players.
- The ball progresses smoothly, with midfielders taking over quickly to lead the transition.
- Construction very concentrated on the left side, with Nuno Mendes being the player with the highest number of interactions.

Interpretations/Conclusions

Vitinha and Bruno Fernandes: Central Playmakers

- Both players are crucial connectors in ball progression due to their high betweenness centrality.
- Vitinha is more involved in the initial build-up phases linking up with full-backs and center-backs;
- Bruno Fernandes operates more in the creative phase, connecting with wingers and forwards.

Interpretations/Conclusions

Ronaldo and Leão: Low Involvement

- Smaller nodes and fewer connections suggest limited involvement, Leão had the smallest node.

Leão vs Bernardo: Asymmetries in the Wide Channels

- Leão Stayed wide and was isolated, reflecting a direct, less associative style.
- Bernardo was more mobile, played inside, helped in build-up, and freed Dalot to overlap.

Playing System

- There are more passes between Bernardo and Rúben than between Rúben and Dalot, showing closer positioning between Bernardo and Rúben;
- Bernardo makes more passes to Vitinha than to Dalot or Bruno Fernandes, which demonstrates his proximity to the former;
- All observations lead to the conclusion that Portugal is structurally organized in a 3-4-3, characterized by a high level of mobility. Four players — Vitinha, Bruno, Cancelo, and Bernardo — display notable positional fluidity and a high number of interactions in central areas.

SWOT Analysis

- Short and secure circulation;
- Strong left-side build-up.

- Offensive isolation of Leão and Ronaldo;
- Asymmetry between flanks – right side underused.

- Improve connections with forwards;
- Use Bernardo as an interior playmaker.

- Potential pressure on the left side;
- Overcrowding in central areas (4 midfielders).
